The Revue in Review

—Kostiner-Postluns Photos

At the top is the Jazz Combo, which is appearing in the Red and White Revue. They are all students in the McGill Conservatory, and most of them are also in the orchestra which supplies the musical background for the show.

In the next picture can be seen Dick Hunter, the Choreographer, talking things over with some of the coeds in the chorus. Dick also appears in a couple of featured spots in the production.

The third picture carries the likeness of Jack Crepeau, here doing his best to appear nonchalant as he inhales on a cigar. He appears in several skits in the Revue.

Summary

It's No Cinch To Produce A Show

By "THE REVUE-ER"

"Beginners onstage please. Curtain going up. Curtain going up." And so the dress rehearsal of the Red and White Revue gets underway.

But don't kid yourself. It's not as simple as that. Before that curtain goes up on a new show, many months of very hard work has been put into the production. That fellow with the dishevelled hair, both on his head and on his cheeks, is the Producer, Eugene Jousse. And his worries are not over yet, for there is always some new problem, some new hitch to worry about and lose more sleep over.

And that guy madly waving his arms about as he tries to explain some point to the trumpet player. He has spent the last four weeks arranging and copying page after page of musical score until all hours of the morning. He is D'Arcy Shea, the Music Director.

Co-ed Coast Tonight at 8

After great conferences among the powers that be, a momentous decision has been reached. Namely, the slide will be in use for the biggest event of the season, the CO-ED COAST! With the additional nine inches of snow and sub-zero weather, the Park Slide will once more be in operation.

The fun is scheduled to get underway at 8.00 p.m. tonight when the coeds will drag their dates to the top of the slide and spend a riotous two hours whizzing down this exciting speedway. Dancing will follow in the Park Slide Club House, where refreshments can be obtained.

Dress for this event should be of the ski pant variety, with thick socks to dance in. At any rate warm clothes are a must.

Although the sale of tickets has been good, there are still a few available for those who should decide at the last minute to go. These are on sale at the Phys. Ed. Office in R.V.C. from the club managers of the M.W.S.A.A. or from Bobbie Fenton at $1.00 a couple.

Bill Russell also has a rather haggard look about him, for he has been doing the same thing.

In fact so has everyone connected with the Revue. They have all pitched in with their contributions, great and small, to make this show a success. For months students, male and female, have been dancing, singing, planning, composing, designing, constructing and just plain sweating in order to do the work of ten people in half the time.

That is what strikes you as being the most significant thing about the Revue. Everyone has worked like a dog, and generally speaking, has enjoyed it. There is a certain spirit behind all the seeming confusion that guarantees that the show will come out on top in the face of any odds. And there have been far too many odds, and far too much opposition from supposedly helpful sources to make the going at all easy. But the show is ready, and everyone connected with it is rather proud of it. It is their baby, and last night it was kicking like mad.

Downstairs the chorus is smearing on makeup, trying hard to make it appear uniform. The last few adjustments are made to tap shoes, and the inevitable latecomer is desperately attempting to get into a fragile costume in a hurry.

Onstage members of the crew under Gordie Pollock, who also hasn't had much rest for the past few weeks, are setting up the scenery at an amazing speed. On the other side someone is cursing like a blue streak because he needs one more stage brace. Over the whole scene presides Joe Duffin, Stage Manager and Electrician, trying hard to remember if he has forgotten anything, directing the stage crew, and seeing if all the players for the opening number are ready.

Running around with last minute reassurances and instructions is Dick Hunter, the Choreographer. He is rather proud of the way his particular protégés, the chorus line, have come around during the last few rehearsals. He is also trying to see if his makeup is OK for his appearance in the opening

VIC OBECK IS NAMED NEW MCGILL FOOTBALL MENTOR

Curtain Rises 8.30 At Revue Opening In Moyse Hall

Still Some Tickets For Sale

The orchestra will finish the overture and the curtain will go up tonight on the first performance of the Red and White Revue of 1947, which is being presented at Moyse Hall beginning at 8:30 sharp. All late comers will be held until the first scene change.

There are still some tickets available for tonight's performance, and there are a few seats left for the other nights and the Saturday matinee. They are on sale in the lobby of the McGill Union.

FINAL DRESS

The final dress rehearsal was held last night on the stage at Moyse Hall, and the show was said to be "the best Revue ever to hit this campus" by one observer. The orchestra was on hand to supply the musical background under the direction of D'Arcy Shea, and the score was one of the brightest that this reporter has ever heard—on this campus.

The most rhythm packed section of the production is the opening number, which features a new marching song. The Executive hopes that this song will become official as far as the university is concerned, and are waiting expectantly to judge audience reaction. It has been submitted as an entry to the competition currently being held to find a new McGill song.

Every student will appreciate the skit on the registration period, in which the strings and red tape of the university and of DVA are satirized in the traditional manner. And the financial woes of the veteran were admirably outlined by Bill Russell in the song "Sixty Dollars A Month", which he wrote himself.

There is plenty of contrast in the show—the chorus present swiny dance routines, Jerry MacKinnon does a graceful ballet, and there are skits and tap numbers thrown in for good measure. And, of course, there is the fashion show, in which several of McGill's most attractive women parade across the stage in some very lovely clothes, which were loaned to the Revue by the T. Eaton Co. When this number was presented

Miss D. King To Lecture Social Work

Miss Dorothy King, Director of the Montreal School of Social Work, will be the featured speaker at the third open lunch time meeting of the McGill Sociological Society today at 1.15 p.m. in Room 74 of the Arts Bldg. Miss King's topic is "Social Work Today".

Born in England, Miss King has had thirty years experience in the field of social work. She received her M.A. degree from Columbia University, and was awarded the O.B.E. in the last honor's list. Her work has been conducted in the U.S.A., England and Canada.

A graduate of the New York School of Social Work, Miss King will treat her topic in relation to will explain the role of the Social worker in present day society, as well as the implications which it has to the science of sociology.

This third meeting is being held open to all sociology students, and to all other interested students.

Varsity to Kill Student Council

Toronto, February 3.—(CUP)—Four briefs were presented yesterday at the University of Toronto to the Public Hearing Constitution of the Student's Administrative Council calling for the end of the SAC, its place to be taken by student legislation.

They advocated the suspension of the Student's Disciplinary Court, by which all misdemeanours at the university are judged at this time. The Faculty of the University of Toronto is also represented on the SAC, and the briefs recommended that they be barred from student government. Under the present system the heads of the various Faculty organizations automatically become members of the Council.

These briefs were presented by organizations which represent over two hundred students. Although these briefs call for the end of the Student's Administrative Council, they have to be approved by the present Council before becoming effective.

Principal Issues Statement

Choice Made After Considering Over 40 Names

By D. S.

It was officially announced last night that Vic Obeck, former American professional football player and assistant coach at Columbia University, will be the man to head the McGill football board of strategy, succeeding Doug "Pop" Kerr. The announcement, which emanated from the Office of Principal F. Cyril James, substantiated previous reports which had been floating around campus athletic circles.

According to the statement released, Obeck, a former member of the mythical "Little" All-American squad was the unanimous first choice of the nine man committee made up of graduates, undergraduates, and faculty members which had been appointed in December to look into the problem of finding someone to take over the helm of the Red and White grid ship. The committee held eight meetings and reviewed a list of forty-one candidates as a prelude to reaching their decision. Obeck was invited to Montreal for a personal interview before the appointment was confirmed.

QUALIFIED BOXER, WRESTLER

The new coach, first full-time grid mentor in McGill's history, is also qualified to instruct in boxing, wrestling, swimming and other sports and is expected to arrive in the city in the very near future to become acquainted with the local situation before the end of the regular college session.

Obeck holds his B.Sc. from Springfield College and has just qualified for his M.A. from Teachers College of Columbia. He spent

C. H. Millard Will Review Strike Scene

Speaking today at 5 p.m. in the ballroom, Mr. C. H. Millard, National Director of the Steelworkers' Union, will review the steel strike from the union viewpoint.

C. H. MILLARD

National Director of the Steelworkers' Union, who will speak at an open meeting to be held at 5 p.m. today in the Union Ballroom on the subject of "Labour's Place in Canada's Future."

and will probably touch upon Labour's more recent demands in connection with a labour code for Canada.

In addition to his post as director of the Steelworkers' Union, Mr. Millard is a member of the National Council of the Canadian Congress of Labour, the largest trade union in Canada. Last year, he was Canadian delegate to the World Trade Union Conference at London.

The open meeting is sponsored by the McGill CCF Club, and is one of a series to bring prominent men in the labour field before students at McGill.

Debate Policy Canadian Immigration

Today at one o'clock in the ballroom will mark the resumption of a popular series of debates when the topic, "Resolved that the present Canadian Immigration policy is sound," will be defended for the Affirmative by Ian Fraser and Gordon Barrington and attacked for the Negative by Phillip Uren newly arrived from England, and John Fetherstonhaugh, under the sponsorship of the Arts and Science Debating Club.

The present Immigration policy allows about 25,000 aliens to enter Canada a year and the Negative side of this debate will attempt to show that there should be at least 100,000 new citizens of our state a year. Undoubtedly there will be very strong arguments on each side as this question is one that is keenly important to our world of today, especially to our country with its vast Northland waiting for exploitation and settlers and Europe's troubled masses looking for a country far from the alarms and scares of that continent.

Another important aspect of this debate is that Jim Hemens, a present holder of a Gold Key, will offer constructive criticism of the debaters with a view to their eventual improvement and inclusion in the inter-university debates. These noon-hour debates are a spring board to the higher echelons of the McGill debating world, a fact sometimes overlooked, and anyone who wishes to take part in them should see Bill Tetley at the debate.

Fieldhouse Views Peace For Germany

"Europe is the loser of the last war, not Germany," declared Professor Fieldhouse, Kingsford Professor of History, last night, in an address to the International Relations Club. He stated that it was going to be fatally easy to produce a situation in which European countries would not feel that Germany has been reduced.

Discussing the big three, Prof. Fieldhouse declared that the "new big three" came into existence and survived only because of their remoteness to the field of conflict. He said that the big countries only came to the aid of the smaller European countries after Germany had defeated them. These European countries before the war, not being able to stand up to Germany, turned to the larger powers, only to find Russia with an alliance with Germany, America trying to legislate herself out of war, and Britain disarmed.

"The European treaties," he said, "are being made by powers that are not in Europe actually." He viewed various desires of the big powers and predicted that within a few years Russia, through their affairs in Prussia, will have again divided Poland. Discussing possibilities of a successful peace, he listed several plans, among which first, that if Russia and America would organize Germany without dominating it, it would leave the possibilities up to Germany to co-operate, and another plan, that Britain should be masters in their own house, like Russia, and work for a European policy.

The Revue Arrives

There has always seemed to be something romantic and secretly exciting about any theatrical production. When this production is an amateur effort and especially a collegiate enterprise, the aura is all the more accentuated. That this situation describes the Red and White Revue can be doubted by no one who has watched the hurry-scurry of last-minute changes and final touches in the rehearsals over the past few days.

The number of extra-curricular activities on the campus has been greatly increased in recent years, but no matter which have caught on, few have had the amazing attraction for participants and spectators which is a main property of the Revue, the biggest show of the year for McGill's stage enthusiasts. Begun long ago and reaching ever greater heights, the show has done a lot to further the careers of a goodly number of undergraduates, and has served well to bring the graduates and students closer together as they appreciate the spirit of McGill which has permeated the Revue.

After a lapse of the war-years, the production was reinstituted last session. The difficulties of reorganization made the effort all the more strenuous with the result that the standard was not up to those of the shows in the late '30's. However, this year, the influx of talent from among the veterans has served to extend the possibilities with the result that a top-flight Revue is on the way. The cast has been in rehearsal for the past few months. The innumerable helpers have prepared the scenery and the costumes and the myriad minor items which must be included to make any show a success. Now the players and the stagehands move to Moyse Hall and prepare to present the latest edition of the famed extravaganza tonight and through the week.

Every effort has been made by the producer, Eugene Jousse, and by his aides-de-camp to give McGill a Revue of which it can well be proud. Every effort, that is, which they can make. The rest is up to us. No show can be a success unless the audience is appreciative and as enthusiastic as the participants. So let's see the show and help make it a top-flight success.

Paging Mr. Anthony

Do you find sitting through lectures a bore? Do you yearn for those extra few hours sleep which you are sure will help you study and pass those exams? Well if you do your problems are solved—that is, if you have an ever-loving wife.

The reason for this outburst is contained in an article from the Vancouver Sun which claims to have on hand a complaint filed by a Yale professor. The latter august has noted that the number of women in his classes is on the increase—with a proportional decrease in the number of men—and it's not due to his S.A. rating. Apparently, some enterprising vets have seen the light and have slept in while the little woman whips down to classes and copies the lecturer's words verbatim. Then she reports back to intelligence and student-hubby sifts the chaff from the grain and goes on from there. Ingenious!

That this is a brilliant manoeuvre is obvious more than somewhat. But this solution is available to a small minority only. What's to become of the poor bachelor? He'll just have to keep plodding and hope that taking lectures from a prof is easier than taking lectures from a wife.

SOCIAL NOTES

IMPORTANT FIGURES IN SOCIAL SPHERE SEEN AT CEREMONY

By L. Ryclyf Ashley
(Daily Society Editor)

One of the season's most brilliant social events took place Friday, January 31, when Mrs. Mary Howell Lieber was presented with the first prize, an illuminated scroll, in Ashley and Aron's recent contest. The ceremony was attended by a select group of 180 university students, and was held in the Grill Room of the McGill Union. The Grill Room was decorated in green and coffee brown for the occasion.

Mrs. Lieber (nee Howell) was recently wed to Mr. Lieber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lieber, sr., of this city. She looked very recherche in a simple dress of Arts' Building grey, with a novel arrangement of buttons which ran vertically up and down the front of the garment. Her ensemble was completed by a red chinchilla stole, which draped in graceful folds from her shoulders. The accessories were in a matching shade.

Mr. Allan Knight, Editor-in-Chief of the McGill Daily, officiated at the imposing presentation, attired in a silk tie, hand-painted by the modern French Expressionist, Pablo Matisse.

The foremost debutante of the season, Miss Augusta Myers Vineberg, was crowned in Village green, laide-des-moutons-jersey. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace, seven bangle bracelets, and an emerald-and-gold lapel pin.

Mr. Norman Moncrieff Cohen and Mr. Jason ("Jack") Shayne of Norm 'n Jack were guests of honor. Mr. L. Ryclyf Fortesque Ashley, VI, and Mr. I. Maurice de Chateau Briand Aron were the hosts.

Among the distinguished guests were: Miss Lya Belle Popper, crowned in clinging blue silk; Mr. Charles Oliver Algernon McHale, attired in a beige jacket and a brown paisley cravat; Mr. "C.O.M." dressed in a brown paisley cravat and a beige jacket; Mr. John Plimpton Lamb, of Medina, New York; Mr. Nathan Grovehill Wolfe; Mr. William Dunsinain Forrest, of Kingston, Ont.; Mr. Jacob Knightsbridge Siskind; Mr. Anthony Dunfield (of the Dunfield Exploitation Co.), and Mr. Ernest W. Importance.

In addressing the large gathering Mr. Knight said: "Unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, I nevertheless think that this is a historic occasion."

"Command Performance"

by Marilyn Richardson

Yesterday afternoon in the United Ballroom, the Players Club presented "Command Performance" to a record crowd. Students were forced to stand along the walls as there were not enough chairs set up for such a large audience. Fortunately, the play was well worth the listeners' discomfort and the director, Jack Busby, deserves congratulations for his fine interpretation of the many and varied characters. His directing brought out the sharp contrasts of type in the ten roles. The staging accommodation was unfortunate. If it had been adequate, the audience would have better appreciated the high level of production which was obtained.

Leon Davicho, as an Italian painter who is passionately in love with a young singer, Jeanette, was bath natural and expressive, and acted throughout with great vitality. Jeanette, played by Jon Bayer, was also very good. She seemed as much at home on the stage as did Mr. Davicho, and was well cast in her part as an emotional young singer. Seymour Spector as a young American playboy, Van Loon, who is not very bright, was extremely natural in the part. If Van Loon was supposed to represent young American manhood, he did it in the true noisy fashion.

Jean McLachlan gave an accurate interpretation of Mabel, a self-righteous young matron, and was well cast in the play. The part of Don Kirby, an unemotional scientist, was extremely well interpreted by Alan Williams. The other members of the cast, although not so experienced, also gave good performances. Some of the cast seemed awkward on the stage at times, and missed a few of their cues, but considering the fact that the play was cast, organized and produced within a period of two weeks, yesterday's performance was a credit both to the executive of the Players Club, and to the director, Jack Busby.

COMING EVENTS

PORTIA WHITE
Several prominent civic and educational leaders have extended their patronage to Portia White's recital, which will take place this Friday, February 7, at His Majesty's Theatre, under the auspices of the Canadian West Indian Progressive Student Centre. The list includes: His Worship Mayor Houde, Dr. Cyril F. James, Principal of McGill University; Dean Henry F. Hall, Sir George Williams College; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. C. B. Price; Mr. John G. McConnell, President of the Standard, and Madame Pauline Donald.

Since her great triumph at New York Town Hall last year, Miss White has made an extensive tour of the eastern States, the West Indies and South America. "Magnificent," "rare," "remarkable," studded all her reviews. "Miss White displayed a rich voice with remarkable range and the fine and versatile art in singing and interpretative power," said The New York Times. "A God-given voice," said St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Miss White has been very aptly called Canada's Ambassador of song. She has chosen to sing on behalf of the Student Centre because of her interest in student affairs.

This enterprising centre was formed last year. Its purpose is to stimulate local interest in the culture of people of African descent and maintain liaison between visiting students and the local community. Miss White's recital is one of a series of events to raise money for its building fund.

Mario Berini

Mario Berini, the brilliant tenor of the New York Metropolitan Opera delighted Friday night's Montreal audience at his concert at the Royal Victoria College by his charming stage personality, the choice of his selections, but most of all by his singing.

The programme opened, with a group of songs in English, among which were Handel's "Where'er you walk" and "Sound an Alarm" from "Judas Maccabaeus", the latter being performed very well by John Newmark at the piano, as well, of course, as Mr. Berini himself. There followed then a group of four German songs by Schubert and Strauss and "Che gelida manina" from the opera "La Boheme".

The aria "La fleur que tu m'avais jetee" from "Carmen" was the most appealing selection of a group of French songs, and was rendered by the tenor with his customary pleasing expression of voice. Other selections in this group were Massenet's "Elegie," and "Le Reve" from "Manon" and Koechlin's "Le The".

The last group of songs on the programme consisted of the traditional "Londonderry Air" and "The Rovin' Gambler" by Niles, both of which were received enthusiastically by the audience. To close the program Mr. Berini chose Vittoria Giannini's "Tell me oh blue, blue sky" and "Song of Love", the melody of which was written by Strauss.

After both the first and the last half of the performance there was great applause, enough to demand encores. Mario Berini sang a total of nine encores during, and at the end of the recital, the best of which was the famous "Song of the plains" which the tenor sang in Russian.

From the point of view of the audience, Mario Berini's interpretations of the many and varied selections he sang, his appealing stage personality, as well as the brilliant piano accompaniment of John Newmark, made the recital a complete success.

LETTER FORUM

Editor, The McGill Daily:—

Last week a notice appeared in the Arts Bldg. calling a meeting for the formation of a Commerce Debating Club, and ending with the exhortation to "get that old Commerce spirit".

Alas, I fear that the old Commerce spirit was only too prevalent; after attending the whole meeting, I was somewhat puzzled to find the proceedings reported in the DAILY as "... the following were elected to office: President, Charles Butterworth; Vice-Presidents, Bob Patterson and Lloyd Rogers; Secretary, Ed Greene."

Now, it is quite true that Mr. Greene was elected by acclamation, but the status of the others would seem somewhat nebulous. Mr. Butterworth efficiently chaired the meeting, explaining that he had been approached by the debating-powers-that-be and asked to select representatives from Commerce in inter-faculty debates, and had done so up till now.

Mr. Patterson, introduced by Mr. Butterworth as an experienced debater, spoke briefly on debating technique. In the case of our other "vice-president," Mr. Rogers, while he sat with Messrs. Butterworth and Patterson, that was the limit of his activities, he just sat. I do not recall him speaking in an official capacity or otherwise. At no time was there discussion of a general election of officers, of nominations, or other trifles of Parliamentary nature.

Come, gentlemen, this is not good enough. We puppets like our puppeteers, to function more smoothly than this. May I suggest that bona fide elections be held in the Commerce Debating Club at the earliest possible date.

The Movies

Spys and secret agents have become the most overused of Hollywood's many overused character types; espionage likewise the most hackneyed of plot material... yet both these ingredients are used to reasonably entertaining advantage in "Notorious" now playing its week run at Loews.

In spite of the highly praised quality of Hitchcock's 'suspense' it is not the direction but the acting of Ingrid Bergman which makes the picture entertaining. It at times slow, movie fare. Miss Bergman as always proves that it is not the part that makes an actress but the actress who makes any part good. Showing one more facet of her versatile ability she plays the part of a "notorious" adventuress as she, portrayed the sweet sister in the Bells of St. Mary. Cary Grant shows his usual brand of smoldering deadpan toughness; Claude Rains is rather wasted in a rather unconvincing part.

In the light of current movie entertainment it is a better than average effort.

POLITICAL COMMENT

BILL OF RIGHTS NEEDED FOR PROTECTION

The Daily's editorial of last Friday discussing methods of protecting civil rights as laid down in Magna Carta and the Petition of Rights expresses an opinion that it is not to our advantage to adopt the Bill of Rights as proposed by John G. Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament for Lake Centre, Saskatchewan.

You prefer to rely upon the protection of "British Justice..." which guarantees to this day our civil liberties." This might have been satisfactory if that method had worked, and we had been able to rely on the idea of British freedom as it was originally set out. But in Canada, British justice has been arbitrarily overruled and action taken against innocent persons.

No reference was made in your editorial to the most serious violation of Canadian civil liberties which took place in connection with the espionage report. Hon. C. G. Power is worth quoting on this subject. "We have abandoned the age-old tradition of the liberty and security of the subject and have substituted therefor the Bourbon and Gestapo system of lettres de cachet, of incarceration without trial, of inquisition without counsel, of solitary confinement. What remains of democracy here?" It is worth pointing out that all this was done by secret order in council and after victory had been secured and the nation was at peace.

WILLIAM L. ARCHER, B.A. II.

in basketball both take place on the same date February 21 in Montreal. Most students would like to see both games if possible, and we, the undersigned, would like to suggest that the times of the games be staggered so that one game follows immediately after the other. I'm sure that the Red and White Society which is doing such a fine job could arrange bus transportation from one game to the other.

Yours Truly,
100 STUDENTS.

Editor, McGill Daily:

During the present term the Daily has been running a record review column. This column is presented under the supposition that McGill students can afford to buy records, but do not have the money to purchase those magazines devoted, at least in part, to such reviews.

An attitude of sympathetic benevolence of this sort should be encouraged. It now remains for us to consider that slightly smaller group who, though interested in foreign affairs, cannot afford a newspaper. And, of course, there will always be those among us who have difficulty scraping together the money for "Theory of Pneumatic Drills," a book required in both engineering and dentistry. This, sir, is the reason, and in the full spirit of public service for which it is so widely renowned, publish in serial form all those textbooks that are at present out of print, too expensive, or too heavy to be carried from the book store to the Arts Building.

Yours by transcription,
Christopher Montgomery.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Last Friday evening, at the Hermitage, the seventh, eighth and ninth Concertos by Handel opened the fifth concert in the Montreal Festivals Chamber Music Series. In place of the usual Bach Suite, the Concerto No. 8 by Vivaldi and a Concertino in F by Pergolesi were introduced in the second half of the program. The group of string players and soloists were as usual under the direction of Alexander Brodt.

The three Handel concertos were performed on the same high plane of artistic integrity and forthright approach. The playing was particularly good in the eighth concerto. It might possibly be asserted that Handel and Bach wrote concertos such as these for many reasons other than out of pure creative necessity. Especially is this apparent when listening to the form as developed from Corelli by the early Italian master, Vivaldi. In his Concerto No. 8, presented last night, there seemed to be a truer inherent feeling revealed in the massive tonal effects; the vitality and strength of the Allegros and the cloistered mysticism of the Larghetto. While there is certainly no variety and clash of a full modern orchestra, there are many subtle color contrasts effected between the solo group and the main body of strings. These were all well brought out by the solo performers, Lionel Renaud, Mildred Goodman Marcus, Lotte Brodt and Doris Killam.

The novel harmonies, delicacy and melodic charm of that rare genius, Pergolesi (who died at 26), were faithfully interpreted by Mr. Brodt and his small orchestra in the Concertino in F, the final work on the program.

Dawsonites Seek Second Place from Migos Tomorrow

McGill Regulars to Bolster Goldbloom Crew for MBL Tilt

The Dawson College Senior Montreal Basketball League squad heads into its last three scheduled games with a battle for second place in the standings in their hands. Last week's loss to the Y.M.H.A. all but knocked the team's championship aspirations to smithereens but should the Dawsonites win their next three while the Y-crew dropped its next trio of encounters, which seems improbable at their present rate, the St. Johns basketweavers would find themselves tied for the loop leadership.

Resigned to the fate of waging a battle for second place, the Dawsonites meet the present occupants of that slot this Wednesday evening at the Currie Gym, in the first of a scheduled doubleheader, with the Budds meeting the Y-aggregation in the nightcap. The Migos presently find themselves two points up on the Red and Blue warriors, and a repetition of an earlier defeat this year at the hands of the collegians, would present a conflict for the shirt-manufacturers' quintet.

MIGOS STRONG
The Migos will be presenting a formidable lineup tomorrow evening, featuring high scorer Ron "Red" Wilson, Wendy Morein, Syd Strulovitch and Ronnie Bower, with Pete Finlay, and Norm Segalowitz in reserve. Coach Mals can almost clinch second place with a win, while the Dawsonites must pull out a victory to remain in the running.

Chieftain Goldbloom will have his men in top form. Deadeyed Ken Taylor, who took three shots in the weekend's Varsity game for McGill and sank two, will be spearheading the collegians' attack in the company of brother Vernon, Johnny Geary, "Red" Somers, Phil Welsberg, Bob Forand and Doug Jones. Pilot Goldbloom is slowly rounding into early season form after an ankle injury, and the slack is being taken up by hard-fighting Vernon Taylor who has shown top form in recent outings. Vern will be the man to watch in Wednesday's game, as well as "Red" Somers, who is hitting peak shape these days, and must now be definitely counted on in Dawson offensive plans.

Down from McGill will be Sam Roth and Bob Duford. Starting time? 8.00 p.m. Jot it down in your handbook, and bring the gal along, too.

Loss at Toronto Snaps Pucksters' Terrific 7 Game Victory Skein

By ALEG MACINTYRE (Daily Staff Writer)

When Dave Campbell's Redmen dropped a 4-1 decision to Varsity Blues over the weekend one of the teams longest winning streaks ended at seven straight—four in league competition and three in exhibition tilts. Since dropping their opening game to Shawinigan Falls the Redmen had waded through six different teams without a loss or a tie.

U. of M. were the greatest sufferers having tasted defeat twice while Queens, Varsity, Yale, Verdun and Granby dropped one apiece.

Only two of the victories could be classed as close decisions. In the first U. of M. contest McGill managed to eke out a 3-2 decision only after staying off a third period drive by the Carabins. In Toronto they weren't pressed too hard to earn a 4-3 victory just before the Christmas layoff. The other contests were won by two or more goals.

McGill players, individually, didn't fare too well in last Friday's game; three of them suffered injuries. Ward Pitfield is now without the services of eight teeth but is back in Montreal after having been kept in hospital Friday night. Bob Broderick's old shoulder injury was aggravated and may take some time to get back into shape. George Hale received a cut on the head. All three players will be in action this coming Friday when the Redmen play hosts to the Gaels from Kingston.

Yesterday the Redmen enjoyed a well-earned rest but Dave Campbell will have them back on the ice today at noon to prepare for the home-and-home series with the Queensmen.

SHOWDOWN FEB. 21

The league has passed the halfway point in the schedule and, as usual, it looks as though it will be a neck and neck battle between Varsity and McGill for top honors. These clubs are deadlocked at the top of the heap with one more Varsity-McGill game to be played in Montreal. Perhaps the fans will (Continued on Page Four) sports 'n stuff...

OBECK SOUNDS GOOD

From what we've seen...and heard of Vic Obbeck, McGill has picked a classy operator for the Red and White's first full-time football coach in history... We think that the University has made a wise move in deciding to engage a full-time grid mentor, and while championships can't be expected immediately, there definitely should be a noticeable improvement in the Redmen's style of play next autumn...

As far as Obbeck himself is concerned, his recommendations and experience make him sound ideal for the job... We know that the Football Probe Committee was very favourably impressed when they met him here a couple of weeks ago, and anybody who's been around as much as the new football boss-man has, should have a wealth of football knowledge at his disposal...

FEBRUARY FROLICS

It looks like February 21st is going to shape up as THE NIGHT in the McGill sports world this year... For 'tis then that Coach Dave Campbell's battered Redbirds skate out against the visiting Queen City icemen in the tilt that will, barring upsets, decide the intercollegiate championships... And that very same evening Sir Arthur Currie Gym will be the scene of a key cage clash when Western sends their highly-rated Mustangs here for the first clash between these two hoop clubs... There's going to be a bit of coinflipping around the campus as the guys and gals try to decide where to go...

It seems that the Red and White puck squad hit an off-form evening in Toronto last week... As one of the McGill players expressed it, "It's the first time in my life that I've ever seen 15 men do everything wrong at the same time". But the Redbirds are vowing vengeance, and knowing the Campbell Clan as we do, we'd advise Ace Bailey's Varsity sextet to watch out!

ATHLETICS NIGHT II

Things were certainly popping the other evening at the Athletics Night... No matter where you wandered in the Sir Arthur Currie sports plant there were crowds... And wherever there were crowds there was some athletic event going on... Athletics Night II was one of the best organized and most efficiently handled affairs of this kind that we've ever seen... We think that Ed Ballon and his hard-working committee rate a few huzzas, with a couple of bravos tossed in...

Perhaps the most pleasant feature of the evening was McGill's resounding victory over Varsity in the basketball game... We doubt if there is one person we know who would have been willing to give the Redmen even an outside chance of finishing 15 points in front... But there's no doubt now that Lou Davies has built a real contender for intercollegiate honors out of a few holdovers from last year's mediocre five and a crop of newcomers...

WELL-COACHED

The Red Raiders proved to be a well-coached, smoothly-functioning team, and it is evident that those exhibition tilts with American colleges have done the local lads a world of good... Their passing was a treat to watch Saturday night, and their airtight zone defense foiled the Blues rather frenzied efforts to overhaul the rampaging Redmen... Of course one game doesn't make a season, as the football squad learnt to their dismay last autumn, but we rather think that Coach Davies was satisfied with the showing of his cagers, and Lou's not easy to please...

Davies was happiest about the substitute situation... He had ten men dressed for the tilt. For six of them it was their first dose of intercollegiate ball, and yet not one Red and White cage artist showed up poorly... McGill has reserve strength this trip, something they've done without for many a moon...

HEAD ACHE BLUES

Poor Coach IRVING PHILLIPS! He's got such good material he doesn't know who to leave out of his intercollegiate boxing team. Tough luck, old man, but from that smile you don't seem to be too sad about it all.

Coach Phillips Weeds Boxers Tomorrow Eve

There might have been a shortage of boxing talent before the Yule holidays, but ever since, Coach Phillips has been faced with the unsavory chore of weeding out his men to represent the Red and White at Toronto February 21. It seems that there is an abundance of top notchers in the lightweight, welter and 165 pounds classes and the coach has been forced to match his boys in exhibition bouts tomorrow, with a spot on the squad at stake.

CREAGHAN AND CORNELL

The fighters involved in the mix-up are Cook, Lee and Marshall at 133, Orr and Johnny Rodgers at 147 and Frank Creaghan plus Dick Cornell at 165 lbs. The rubber act to be the Creaghan-Cornell battle. Both these lads have had plenty of experience, with Creaghan the cutie and Cornell the boy with the wallop.

However, some off-the-griddle guff from the inside dopsters points to the fact that Mr. Creaghan has been sharpening up his punching prowess considerably and that he plans to carry the fight to Cornell. This seems to be quite in line with Dick's plans, as the dark-haired dandy has been concentrating on speed plus strength to catch up with Frank.

RODGERS FACES OFF

Phillips was so pleased with Johnny Rodgers showing last Saturday that he has been forced to

Red Intermediates Combat MacDonald In Basketball Game

The McGill Intermediate basketball squad will attempt to continue their winning ways tomorrow night when they tangle with the boys from MacDonald College at the Currie gymnasium.

The Redmen are fresh from a convincing win over Georgians last week, and if their play continues to be as good as the form which was shown then, Coach Rutherford need have very little doubt as to the issue when the teams trot out on to the floor tomorrow eve.

The Aggies, however, will constitute no easy mark for our boys. They are currently in second spot in the league standings, and they apparently mean to stay there, or possibly move up into a first place tie with the Flying Frenchmen from U. of M., which is just what will happen if they can put the bee on the McGill outfit.

BEAUGRAND AND ELO

Top men for McGill at present are of course the ever excellent trio of Beaugrand, Hodge and Elo. These boys never fail to turn out a top notch brand of ball, and can always be relied upon to produce the extra spurt that brings plenty of wins to any team. In this respect they are followed closely by all the other basketweavers on the squad. Men like Fitzgerald, Murray, Lanier and Davine are at home in any cage company, and are always in there as far as points are concerned.

The Mac squad also have their stars, in the persons of Al Tennant, John Hamilton, and Bill Shipley. These hoopsters are all dangerous, and will bear watching when the battle takes place. Their squad puts great emphasis on zone defence, and the result of their efforts in this direction is reportedly one of the tightest zones in the league.

match him up with Orr, who was regarded as a cinch for the job previously. Orr is out of sick bay and will fight off with Rodgers on Thursday. With men who know their boxing best, Rodgers rates very highly in their books. He's got the makings of a great scrapper, and surprises with his vicious attack and added K.O. power. As for the feather-lightweights, if (Continued on Page 4)

Dawson Intermediate Hockey Hoop Squads to Invade USA

By GRIFF 'N' BOOB.
Tomorrow morning at 9.30 a.m. a bus will pull out of Dawson containing the Intermediate basketball and hockey squads. Heading for Plattsburg, New York, these lads will pull in a few hours later to Champlain College — one of the three associated veterans' colleges of northern New York State. Your reporters have not as yet set eyes on this undoubtedly beautiful campus on the shores of Lake Champlain, but we imagine it to have many of the pleasant aspects of our home Dawson one. The student population there is somewhat the same as ours consisting of some 1,800 veterans. Also similar is the fact that they have a capable athletic director in the person of Commodore L. S. Perry, who made the arrangements with the Dawson A. D., Em Orlick.
This will be the second time in three weeks that the Blue and Red banner has been carried south of the border and this time better results are expected. On their last outing to Clarkson College in Potsdam, N.Y., the St. Johns' Seniors dropped two consecutive contests to a powerful Clarkson team in Malone and Potsdam on January 10 and 11 respectively. However on a return visit to the Dawson campus last month the Potsdam cagers were defeated by the home boys.
The Champlain team will also be seen by Dawsonites in return matches to be held here before the month's end—the basketball squad coming up on Feb. 18, and the hockey team on the 24th. "Should the American cagers prove too strong for our intermediates" states Athletic Director Em Orlick, "there is a good chance that they may meet (Continued on Page 4.)

Hale Brothers Keep Lead In Scoring Race

The Hale Brothers still remained atop the intercollegiate scoring race despite a pointless weekend. However, the opposition crowded around them.

TOMMY FIRST

Though Tommy Hale still remains two points in front in the third Daily compilation of scoring totals having scored ten points, Brother George found himself sharing second spot with Johnston, of Toronto, and Gignac, of University of Montreal.

Red Shorts by babs

The girls came home from Mac this week-end with a double win. They invaded the farmerettes on Saturday and won both the basketball game and the archery contest.

MAC TRIMMED

Trouncing the Mac team with a score of 32-14, ten points were scored by both Bobby Fenton and Louise Macfarlane, Betty Evans helping to add up the score. Other forwards who played a good game were Molly Camp and Margie Duguid. The guards who defended our basket so well were Audrey Sephton, B. J. McLeod, and Sue Bishop, as well as Heddle Brown and Elaine Ritchie.

In the first quarter of the game, Mac took the lead and appeared to dominate the play. Then our girls got used to the floor and began to score. From then on we were on the road to victory. At times McGill displayed some very smooth passing, showing some of the style that they had last year when they won the Intercollegiate title. The team still needs a lot of practice before they will be ready to face such competition as Toronto and Western will put up. They are playing them at the end of this month in the Inter-Collegiate tournament.

In the archery they pointed up 627 points, but McGill took the lead with 667 points. On the team were Dorothy Ing, Betty Watt, Felice Arsenault, Marjorie Karn and Barbara Walsh. The first three were the best scorers on the team, and every one shot well, in spite of a longer range than usual. Pearl Heatley and Hilda Tremblott also went out to Mac with the team, but they did not shoot for there were only six Mac archers.

There is a correction to be made on the scores of the Intersection Archery contest. Betty Watt came second with 162 points and not Barbara Walsh.

Elimination Tournament

There will be an individual elimination tournament in the inter-section squash tournament next week, Tuesday, February 11, at 7 p.m., in the Sir Arthur Currie Gym. Anybody can go who has played squash at one time or another, but nobody who has never played will be admitted.

Ring Rammers In Fierce Fray Yester Night

Last night the Dawson Floor hockeyists came up with another slam bang battle when the Bear Cats defeated Moyse Boys in the third of a best of three series to take the semi-finals.

CLOSE GAME

The game was a close one, and the best of the year, as far as good fast play was concerned. It started out at a hefty clip, and it wasn't long before Caron opened the scoring with a pretty goal. From then on the game was fast and furious, with plenty of fast action on both sides. Caron, Gauthier, Rathwell, and Pihlainen were the scorers for the Bearcats, and all three turned in a good performance. Moyse Boys, however, were (Continued on Page 4)

French Socy To Present First Carnival

On Tuesday, February 18, the French Society of McGill is presenting its first Mardi Gras Carnival in the form of a costume ball. Dancing to the music of Archie Etienne's orchestra will continue from 9 p.m. until 1, in the Union Ballroom.

The proceeds of the ball are being donated to the Save the Children Fund; when you buy a ticket ($2 a couple) you not only look forward to a wonderful evening of fun, but you also help feed and clothe some poor child in Europe. Although formal dress is acceptable, the executive of the society hopes that the majority of the guests will enter fully into the spirit of the Mardi Gras Carnival by wearing costumes. Prizes are to be awarded for the best costume and the most original one.

Tickets may be bought from Nicole Baudelaire and Marie-Claire Kirkland; Pierre Langlois, Commerce 2; Michael Sakellariopoulos, Beatty Hall; Emile Colas, Law 1, and from any members of the French Society executive.

LPP, CCF's Hold Debate On Socialism

A debate was held last night in the Union Ballroom between the L.P.P. and the C.C.F. Clubs at eight o'clock. The subject was "Resolved that the dictatorship of the proletariat is necessary in order to achieve socialism". The speakers for the L.P.P. were Jon Switzman and Norman Nerenberg, while those for the C.C.F. were John Wolfe and Michael Oliver.

M. R. Nerenberg stated that there are a variety of types of states — all dictatorships of the bourgeoisie, and that there is no freedom under capitalism. Dictatorship of the proletariat will come first by socialism than by Communism, he continued, but even Communism is not a perennial form of government.

The first speaker for the C.C.F., John Wolfe, said that the questions were "How are we going to improve socialism? and, Does the world move towards socialism?" He declared that fascism, not socialism, was the result of the last depression, because the working class is weakened by depression, and so can be easily influenced. He further stated that the Communists had never yet created a revolution, but had only taken over governments which had collapsed. He said that the democratic process was the only way to acquire socialism.

Jon Switzman then took the a year as football coach at Akron University and was an assistant coach as well as player with the Boston professional club, the Chicago Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers. Last season, while working for his M.A. at Columbia, he acted as assistant to Lou Little and according to the noted American mentor is eminently qualified to take over McGill's football destinies.

SERVED WITH U.S.N. Obceck served with the American Navy during the War, and was an officer in the U.S. Navy V-5 Physical Education programme for over a year. He was also a gunnery and athletics officer on a series of Destroyer Escorts for two years.

The official confirmation of Obceck's appointment ended a series of rumors concerning the possible successor to Doug Kerr, who resigned last fall, after a season in which the McGill team won only one contest in six. A whole host of names had been suggested as possible candidates for the job with Joe Krol, Frank Gnuyp and Art West being most frequently mentioned.

PRINCIPLES OF AMATEURISM After issuing a brief report in which they upheld the principles of amateurism as defined in the Intercollegiate code, the Committee charged with the task of seeking a new coach had stories published in various newspapers all over the United States and Canada advertising the fact that McGill was seeking a new coach. Once the flood of applications had been received, the nine-man group took up the problem of selecting its nominee for the post and chose Obceck to head the list. The recommendation was handed in to the Principal and the Board of Governors and was confirmed by the Finance and Executive Committee of the Board.

'The Monkey Wrench,' Calls for Copy

"The Monkey Wrench", the publication of the Engineers, is starving for lack of material. This magazine which is usually published three times through the course of the year, has not appeared so far this year because of a dearth of material, usually submitted by those who have literary talent amongst the engineers.

All kinds of articles are welcome technical or popular, whichever the writer has a talent for. This should be a good chance for prospective writers to express their views. Any contributions should be given to the Literary Editor Lionel Isen, or posted on the notice board in the Engineering Building to him. As soon as sufficient material is received, this popular publication will be issued.

While on the subject of contributions, it should be remembered that the design contest for an engineering pin is still open. This contest carries a prize of $10 and goes to the person who submits the best design, which is to be inscribed on a pin or ring. The layout should not include too much detail as the crest is likely to be only half an inch full, size. The deadline is Feb. 15 and all entries should be submitted to Doug Follette, the first vice-president of the E.U.S. Hal Gordon, president of 1st year engineering, has reported receipt of several good entries and if the McGill-men wish to get themselves a little extra cash, they had better hurry. The design should include a space where the year of the engineer could be put.

Mardi-Gras Photos To Be Printed Soon

By The Canadian University Press. Vancouver, February 3.—Eastward bound from Vancouver, coming air mail special delivery is a cut of two of UBC's sorority girls who a week ago had their hands so soundly slapped by Father Francis Chalon, Chaplain of St. Paul's Hospital. Readers of The Daily will remember a story last week in which Father Chalon was quoted as terming the costumes for the sorority-sponsored Mardi Gras festival as "indecent" and "immoral".

The costumes, designed by the girls to represent Ball and Chinese characters, he denounced as products of "weak and immature minds" and not based on fact, and suggested that people from an institution such as the University of British Columbia should not condone such immorality.

While UBC officials have declined to comment on Father Chalon's remarks, the president of the Alma Mater Society, which corresponds to McGill's SEC, accused the priest of taking a narrow viewpoint and suggested to the press that, as the cause was charity, Father Chalon might add his $3.50 to the rest and go along.

Whether his accusations are justified McGill students will soon be able to judge for themselves. The Daily is planning to print a cut of two of UBC's lovely coeds just as soon as it arrives.

ACROSS CANADA

The other day The McGill Daily clipped a notice from the Xaverian Weekly, Antigonish, N.B., taken from the Windsor Star to the effect that a man from Calgary, Alberta, planned to travel 2,250 miles to Montreal on horseback.

It happened in a biology lab. The student, who ate the rabbit, refused to give his name for publication. Two students were busy dissecting a rabbit.

Said the first student, "This rabbit looks good enough to eat."

"So it does," said student number two, cutting off a piece of the late rabbit's foot.

"Don't take me too seriously," said No. 1 when he noticed the vicious look in his companion's eye.

"It sure does look pretty in that formaldehyde," said the would-be eater.

"I'll bet you a dollar that you don't eat this Oryctolagus cuniculus."

The starved student hesitated for a moment and then lifted a piece of the deceased rabbit with a pair of tweezers. First he chewed slowly, looking rather scared, and then he seemed to enjoy it.

"How are you feeling?" asked the darer, handing him his well-earned dollar.

The eater looked up from his meal and replied, "Please pass the ketchup."
